Summary: Amber's eyes gave away so many things. They gave away her deepest thoughts and feelings. Her eyes were truly the window to her soul, but they came from a rough backround. A backround of Velma, her dad, and her mother's lover.

Windows the the Soul

Hey people! This is my first hairspray story and its more of a one shot. I don't think I qualifies as a drabble, maybe a really cute story you all will love? I don't know. But anyway it's a look into Velma Von Tussle, her husband, and her lover. Please review!

Peace

Lauryn

Velma and Johnny were in love. And not the fake kind of love, were for people you were "I love you sweetheart", but behind the scenes it was just lovers and fights. Velma and Johnny had real true love. The kind of love people would kill to have.

Velma was from rich high society, she was in all the pageants and in the society page of the paper. She was raised in the world were your position in society was more important then anything, even your family. She was raised to know that if you were on top of the social ladder everything was good and money was very important.

Johnny sold those papers and worked for the pageants. Johnny grew up in a world were love and family were the most important thing. If you had those, you were set for life. It didn't matter if you were rich or poor, family and love came first.

They had something special and nobody could deny that. But Velma's mother, Jennifer, started pushing Velma to be the best. She wanted Velma to have everything she never had growing up. Velma was shoved into the Miss Baltimore Crabs competition and won, that's were she met Lucas Von Tussle.

He was perfect everyone said, Velma and Lucas were the perfect match, there children would be just stunning. Velma reluctantly gave in to her mother's idea and she married Lucas, although in her heart she always knew that Johnny was the one for her. One year into their marriage, Velma had a beautiful baby girl, Amber Lynn Von Tussle. With in a month, Lucas was gone. He vanished, disappeared, ran for it. Velma was left to raise her daughter, alone.

Maybe Lucas left because of her eyes, Amber's eyes were the prettiest shade of blue, a light shade with a hint of purple. Velma had green eyes and Lucas had grey eyes. Johnny had light blue eyes with a hint of purple in them.
